BUILDING END-USE

Brewery

Pretoria Fields Brewery is the first craft brewery to open in Albany, GA. The project involved an addition to an existing historic building in an urban area of the city's downtown district.

The entire microbrewery consists of three buildings. One dedicated for production and making beer, a tasting room including space for tours and sampling products, and the last building includes a courtyard for people to sit and enjoy their sample beer.

The three buildings feature an A-Panel wall system and a Nucor CFR™ standing seam roof system.
